

James "Jim" Czarnik is a Colonel in the U.S. Army and for more than 30 years has served as a soldier, officer, physician and commander in special operations in both Afghanistan and Iraq. He also was the senior Department of Defense medical lead on the ground in Liberia during the Ebola response. Jim is a recognized leader in military pre-hospital care and serves on the Undersecretary of Defense for Health Affairs' Committee on Tactical Combat Casualty Care. He graduated from the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences and is Board Certified in Emergency Medicine.